Public Morals Committee Report:

"Removing the mention of evolution from Kansas' science curriculum is being called one of the most significant victories for creationists," states Religion Today. Is it really? Should we, as God's people, rejoice with this or hang our heads in shame that we let it come this far?

Christians in America are fast asleep. When prayer was taken out of schools, we said there was nothing we could do. Now, 30 years later, we wonder what is wrong with our children.

Genesis 1:1 clearly states "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." If we teach our children this verse, there will never be a question in respect to where humans come from.

We also found in Genesis 1:26 that we are made in His image. Adam was in His image as well as those of us here today.

No, this is not a victory, but a wake up call. We, as Christians, need to go back to the beginning so we may clearly see the end.

Respectfully submitted,
